

CHAUFFEUR

Who Drove Sutton And Party to Camp on Night Of Fight

SAYS SUTTONS ARMS WERE HELD THAT ADAMS MIGHT HIT HIM.

SERGEANT DEHART HAS ATTACK OF "FORGETTIS"

SENSATIONAL TESTIMONY IS EXPECTED FROM AN UNKNOWN WITNESS.

Special to the Daily News.
Annapolis, July 24.—William L. Owens, the chauffeur who drove the late Lieutenant James Sutton, of Portland, Ore., and a party of other young naval officers from the Carvel Hall to the Marine Camp on the night of the fatal shooting of Sutton, testified yesterday before the Naval Board of Inquiry that the Oregonian's arms were held by several officers, "apparently to make it easy for Lieutenant Adams to hit Sutton."

The navy has practically rested its case. Lieutenant Roelker, who is supposed to have been hit with a bullet from Sutton's revolver during the quarrel, has not yet been located, although his testimony is considered most important.

The witnesses remaining to be examined are Lieutenant Utley, Surgeon Cook, Lieutenant Templin M. Potts, Jr., Prof. Gilbert F. Coleman, of the Naval Academy; Frank Poge, Esq., of Washington, D. C.; Private Charles Kennedy, Mrs. Sutton and her daughter.

The substance of the testimony so far of the young officers who were with Sutton on the night he met his death has been to the effect that Sutton shot himself following the fight on the parade grounds.

It was said yesterday the Suttons would call an eye witness to the shooting who would throw an entirely different version on the affair.

Refusal to Disclose Names.
Contact would not disclose the name of this witness, but it is said he is Private Charles Kennedy, of the Marine Corps, now stationed at Norfolk, Va. Kennedy has been subpoenaed at the request of the Suttons.

Mrs. Rose Sutton Parker, the sister, is not expected to testify before next week. She will tell in detail the interview, she says she had with Lieutenant Adams soon after her brother's death, which Adams practically denied in his testimony.

Sergeant DeHart, recalled to the stand yesterday, had a serious attack of "forgettitis." He was among the first to reach the scene after the shooting.

"You, as Sergeant of Marines, on the ground near your barracks came upon a group of officers, one of whom lay on the ground shot, the one you had shortly before accompanied, and you did not take sufficient notice of the situation to tell how many and who the officers present were, is that right?" asked Mr. Davis, counsel for the Suttons.

"Yes, sir."

Mr. Davis wanted to know why the Sergeant took the revolver handed him at the time.

It Came Suddenly.
"I took the revolver as any one would take an object handed to him suddenly," replied DeHart.

"It didn't occur to you to say to the officer, 'Sir, I am not the one to take that revolver?'"

"No, sir."

"But it did occur to you to throw the revolver away, didn't it?"

"Yes, sir."

Chauffeur Owens said he drove them through the Naval Academy Grounds, and nothing happened until they got across the cemetery bridge on the "dumpp" when some one told him to stop.

"Lieutenant Adams jumped from his seat and threw off his collar and coat, and made a rush at Lieutenant Sutton as the latter got out of the car," said Owens. "I heard no argument which might suggest trouble before that. The officers grabbed Sutton, and I heard Sutton say: 'Go away, Adams, I don't want any trouble.'"

"Then some one told me to 'beat it.'"

The witness said he heard Sutton say: "If he wants to fight I'll fight him."

Making It Easy for Adams.
It was here that Owens said he did not think the officers were holding Sutton to restrain him from attacking Adams, but it was his impression that they were trying to make it easier for Adams to hit him.

On cross-examination Owens told of taking Lieutenant Sutton, another

OKLAHOMA BLACK HANDERS TAKE STAND ON PRICE OF CRUDE OIL.

Special to the Daily News.
Bartlesville, Okla., July 24.—James O'Neill, general manager of the Pacific Oil and Gas company, declared during a conference with a committee of local oil producers yesterday that he had received several threatening letters, in which the writers declare the company's property at Bartlesville would be dynamited if the price of oil were again reduced.

Two reductions in the price of oil, in all aggregating six cents, have been made during the last month.

Mr. O'Neill promised the Oklahoma producers that his company would begin laying a pipe line from Oklahoma to the gulf, if the Legislature should meet in special session and amend anti-trust laws so that the Pacific Oil and Gas company would not be amenable.

MAYOR HAS OPPORTUNITY TO SHOW INTEREST FOR THE TAXPAYERS.

Special to the Daily News.
Dayton, July 24.—Mayor Burkhardt said today that he would follow the plan announced in Cincinnati and Cleveland of appointing a member of the Board of Public Service and of the Board of Public Safety, and the names would be given out next week.

One member of each board will be appointed to serve under the name law, from August 1.

The mayor announced his intention today when his attention was called to the advice given Mayor Bond, of Columbus, by City Solicitor Burnham, that mayors of Ohio municipalities will have no right to make the appointments of members of Boards of Public Safety August 1.

CHAOTIC

Is the Present Situation In Cities Of the Buckeye State

AS A RESULT OF THE COMING INTO EFFECT OF THE PAINE FEDERAL PLAN LAW.

CHIEFS OF THE POLICE AND FIRE DEPARTMENTS

MUST BE APPOINTED BY MAYORS AUGUST 1, ACCORDING TO ATTORNEY GENERAL.

Special to the Daily News.

Columbus, July 24.—Mayor Bond must also appoint new chiefs of the police and fire departments to take office August 1, if he reorganizes the public safety department on that date by retiring the two directors and replacing them with a single director, as he has said he expects to do, according to Attorney General Denman's decision, given members of the State City Solicitors' association at a meeting here recently.

Section 129 of the Paine law, Mr. Denman said, makes it imperative for the mayors of municipalities to appoint two new chiefs, together with a safety director, August 1. The section reads: "The mayor shall be elected for a term of two years and shall serve until his successor is elected and qualified. He shall be an elector of the corporation. He shall appoint and have the power to remove the director of public service, the director of public safety and the heads of sub-departments of the departments of public safety and service." In this connection the code says all save elective officials shall begin their terms August 1.

The two chiefs being heads of sub-departments of public safety, Mr. Denman decided the mayor and not safety director must appoint them.

Mayor Bond said he had not considered this phase of the Paine law controversy and had not considered appointing new police and fire chiefs. He will investigate the subject immediately and confer with officials in Mr. Denman's office.

Although Mayor Bond has said he would not disturb the police and fire department officers, he would not say last evening who would be the new police and fire chiefs if he found it necessary to make new selections. It is believed, however, Chiefs O'Connor and Lauer would be reappointed. In view of the uncertainty of skilled lawyers about the meaning of the Paine law, Mayor Bond will proceed slowly in making appointments.

Any attempt to oust Chiefs Lauer and O'Connor from their respective departments would be resisted. The chiefs could fight with a fair chance of success. In view of the conflicting opinions of attorneys and city solicitors about the suspension of the civil service system between August 1 and January 1. Attempts to oust patrolmen and firemen also would be fought.

Pay to be Held Up.
The mayor's new safety director will have trouble drawing his first month's salary. City Auditor Noble and City Treasurer Smith yesterday said they would withhold the warrant and money until the courts decide whether the new director is legally in office. This will take several months, as this feature probably will go to the supreme court with the suit involving the right of the mayor to oust present safety directors.

Mr. Noble is undecided whether he has authority to draw a warrant for the $4,000 salary the new safety director may receive. The present directors get only $600, and the semi-annual appropriation ordinance for the last half of 1909, which directs the expenditure of money, provides for only a $600 salary for each of the two directors.

Other Officials Involved.
Should an attempt be made August 1 to transfer the charities, corrections and building inspector's departments to the safety department, as provided by the Paine law, Mr. Noble said he would not draw warrants until compelled by the courts for the expenditures of the departments, as the appropriation ordinance says they must have the approval of the service directors.

"The semi-annual appropriation ordinance for the last half of the year was passed without reference to the Paine law, and further complications will result," said Mr. Noble. Council's finance committee has made up the 1910 budget without considering the new law. I don't believe the budget should be presented to council for passage until the offices and salaries in city departments have been established as provided by the Paine law.

THE STATE-WIDE PROHIBITION MEASURE IS SUSTAINED BY COURTS.

Special to The Daily News.

Memphis, Tenn., July 24.—St. Louis stockholders of the Tennessee Brewery, located here, lost ground in their proceedings filed before Chancellor Minor to test the constitutionality of the act prohibiting the manufacture of beer in this state.

The chancellor decided today that as the plaintiff's bill averred that the act violated the fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States, the proceedings should be transferred to the Federal courts.

An effort will be made to get United States Judge Sanford of Knoxville, to come here and try the case at once. It is expected to reach the Federal Supreme court.

Prohibitionists are jubilant over this victory. Luke E. Wright, late secretary of war, is chief counsel for the St. Louis litigants.

IN ALLIANCE

CHARLES S. BENSON IS WEDDED TO WOOSTER GIRL.

WEDDING, SOMEWHAT IN NATURE OF ELOPEMENT, A SURPRISE.

Concerning the wedding of Charles S. Benson of this city, to Miss Mabel Clark of Wooster, the Wooster Republican has this to say: "When a reporter for The Republican visited the probate judge's office after dinner Friday, he learned that a license to wed had been issued to Mr. Charles S. Benson of Lima, and Miss Mabel Clark of Wooster. The license was issued Wednesday, July 21st, and for some reason, was not handed out until today, doubtless at the request of the young man. Inquiry at the home of the bride resulted in showing that the mother, Mrs. C. H. Clark, knew nothing of the issuing of a license, and so far as she knew, the wedding had not taken place."

"Miss Clark has for some time been making her home with a sister in Lima. The young lady came here Monday on a visit, and was accompanied by Mr. Benson. Miss Clark left the city saying she was going to Alliance to visit a sister, Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. Andrew Straus, and as she was accompanied by Mr. Benson, it is presumed they were married by some clergyman in that city."

"Mr. and Mrs. Clark had not opposed the union, but were very much surprised to learn that Miss Mabel had decided to wed without their consent or letting them know her intentions. The young people are expected to return to the city this evening."

Mrs. Benson is quite well known here, where she has resided with a sister, Mrs. Cohn, for some time. She was in charge of the ticket window at the Grand Theatre, formerly on the east side of the Square, during its existence, and this summer has been an employee of Hoyer Park. Mr. Benson is a well known Lima young man, and his host of friends in this city will all join in extending best wishes when he and his bride return.

Mrs. Bates was addicted to the use of morphine and since her arrival at the work house made considerable commotion by threatening to kill herself because not provided with the drug.

"DEEP SKY"

BROUGHT HIS FEATHERS AND BEADS TO THE MARRIAGE LICENSE BUREAU.

Special to The Daily News.
New York, July 24.—In expectation that he would have to don his plumage and war paint, Chief Deep Sky, of the Sioux, carried his feathers and beads and other adornments to the marriage bureau in the City Hall this afternoon.

His fiancée, a pretty little girl of 21, gave her name as Adele Rowland. She consented to be the bride of the warrior after a courtship of a week, and they will be married next Saturday.

The Indian answers to the name of Ka Ron latons, and was born in Falls City, S. D., 37 years ago. The consent of the oldest chief of the tribe had to be obtained.

Miss Rowland made a personal appeal to White Cloud, and she succeeded in overcoming the natural dislike that the Indians have for marriages outside the tribe, and he gave his approval to Deep Sky's choice.

CARDINAL

May Visit In Columbus During His Trip to Salt Lake

HEAD OF THE ROMAN hierarchy TO MAKE AN EXTENSIVE JOURNEY.

WILL DEDICATE THE NEW CATHEDRAL BUILT IN UTAH

NOT STRONG HE WILL TRAVEL BY SLOW STAGES TO THE TERMINUS.

By United Press.

Columbus, Ohio, July 24.—James Cardinal Gibbons, who will soon make a journey from his home in Baltimore to Salt Lake, Utah, for a mammoth Catholic celebration, has been appealed to by Catholic clergymen from this state to stop in Ohio or a few days on his way to Salt Lake, but has not yet given his consent. Those close to him, however, say he probably will visit Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton and Cincinnati within the next few weeks. He will leave his home early in August with Archbishop Falconio, who will accompany him both ways on the journey. It is said he will travel to Salt Lake by way of New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Chicago, Kansas City and Denver.

In the party besides the cardinal and Archbishop Falconio will be a large number of Catholic priests and bishops who have made up the cardinal's parties to the cities of the East during the last few years.

Will Travel Slowly.
Cardinal Gibbons is not as strong as he once was, and therefore will have to travel slowly during this trip. It is said also that he wishes to make a careful trip this time on his way across two-thirds of the continent, and therefore he will remain from two to seven days in each large city he visits. He has made few trips west in the last few years and wishes at this time to meet as many of the American Catholics as his health will permit. So far he has made no definite itinerary, but it is said this will include the route outlined.

The celebration in Salt Lake is scheduled for early in October, which will leave the cardinal and his party plenty of time to make the trip here, which will be made to dedicate a cathedral in the Mormon capital.

Elaborate Welcome Here.
If the cardinal visits Columbus an elaborate welcome will be extended by local Catholics. It will be his first visit in this city.

The cardinal is the highest representative of the pope in America. He is the second cardinal in America and has held the office since 1886. He is 75 years old and is considered one of the greatest ecclesiastical writers in the world. He was ordained a priest in 1861 in Baltimore and within a year was made chancellor of the cathedral at Baltimore. In 1872 he was assigned to Richmond, Va., as bishop and in 1877 became archbishop of Baltimore and remained bishop until 1886, when he was made cardinal.

BABY ATTACKED

The Cigarmakers arrived home
last night, after waiting two days in Marion for the showers to cease.
Only one contest was played with the Diggers, and the locals dropped that.

"All the boys are in perfect trim,"
said Captain Lee Fohl, "and we expect to hold our lead through to the end of the season. Manfield is the dark horse to be feared just now,
and our three games should be hum-
mers."

The pitchers are going well and some of the boys are hitting like fiends. Sykes, who was leading all locals in batting, had a slump in the few recent games played, but is now
only one point below little Reilly,
with whom he has been seeing-sawing
all season. Reilly is hitting .251.

While Sykes is slugging .230 and has fifteen two-batters, seven triples and two home runs to his credit, making him the real slugger of the team. All the other boys are below .250 but going well.

Capt. Fohl did not know who he will use tomorrow, but expects to put his strongest wiring staff
against the hard-hitting Tigers.

they are talking of having Paul run a

Horr to Coach Northwestern.

M. E. Horr, captain of last year's University of Syracuse football team,
has been chosen as football coach at Northwestern college, Evanston, Ill.
Not only was Horr one of the greatest football players, but was also a noted athlete in track and field events, and
besides his duties as a football coach Horr will also be the coach for the purple track team. Horr will graduate this year from the Law school at Syracuse, and his duties at Northwestern will begin with the opening of the next school year in September.

In the new game of football Horr is considered an expert. He played on the Syracuse team for four years, and twice during this time he was picked by Walter Camp as an all American tackle. During his senior year he was captain of the team.

Horr will be employed at North-western all the year round. After the football season is over he will take hold of the track team and will have charge of the big indoor athletic field until outdoor work can be taken up after the weather moderates.

Fred Archer began his wonderful career at twelve by winning two races
on consecutive days and in his third year had twenty-five winning mounts.
George Fordham won his first laurels
at Brighton, England, when he was only thirteen. Harry Cusance scored his first win on Ada at the age of fifteen, and Tom Cannon had his first mount at fourteen.

the latter team, struck out twenty-four men and allowed only one hit. Young Bowen, who is only seventeen years old, pitched several no hit games last season. He has had several offers to play semiprofessional ball, but he prefers to remain in the office of the Hamilton Trust company, of which his father is president.

Baseball Popular in Panama.

Baseball follows the flag even in our tropical possessions. In the Panama canal zone two leagues recently played a series of championship games. At Colon the sport has taken such a hold that it is proposed to put up a new baseball park before the next league season. The games draw attendances varying from 600 to 1200.

Olympic Games at Sweden in 1912.

The question of holding the Olympic games in Berlin, Germany, in 1912 has been settled in the negative, there being practically no chance of completing the stadium in time. It was therefore proposed at the conference of the Olympic committee in that city to hold the next games at Stockholm, Sweden.

JACKSON FOR MAYOR.

While a few names are being mentioned as seekers of the Republican nomination for Mayor, that of Walter S. Jackson has come forward. Superintendent George Dyer, of the Lake Erie & Western; C. H. Cory, former master mechanic of the C. H. & D. and one or two others have also been heard.

The organization has made no mention of its favorite. There has been no call so far as known issued at this time for the assembling of the city committee, but as registrars in the new precincts must be certified to the Board before another month, this call is not far distant.

The Republicans in their prearrangements are showing much wisdom. Mr. Cory is sufficiently well known to need no introduction. He is a man of many affairs; banker, manufacturer, and in every way fitted to guide the destinies of his adopted city.

Mr. Dyer is equally well qualified. He has made a most successful career on the rail; is known as one of the best posted and best managers in railroad life, while his friends are legion.

Mr. Jackson is of the younger element. Possessed of a good education, he has come from the ranks and during college days was a knight of the rail himself, working, in fact, under Mr. Dyer, his possible opponent. Mr. Jackson is now the capable secretary of the Lima Progressive Association.

These three gentlemen are before the public at the present time, and whether any or all will go before the primary is a question. The timber, however, must be written as very high quality and acceptable by any party.

CELEBRATE AT FORT NIAGARA.

Special to the Daily News.
Buffalo, N. Y., July 24.—Historic Fort Niagara, founded 230 years ago by La Salle, was today the scene of a celebration in commemoration of the most stirring event in its career. Just 150 years ago today a battle was fought which resulted in the surrender of the fort by the French to the English. The Niagara Frontier Landmarks Association, which has many members in this city, was in charge of today's program.

In 1759 Niagara was the strongest in the long line of French fortifications which stretched from Quebec to New Orleans. The struggle between the English and French, known as the French and Indian war, was then at its height, and the English determined to take Fort Niagara. Early in July a strong force of British soldiers, commanded by General Prideaux, set out in bateaux from Fort Oswego, made their way up Lake Ontario and landed at Four Mile Creek, east of Fort Niagara. The English came within a short distance of the fort and threw up three parallel lines of earthworks at the east side of the fort. They also crossed the river and where now stands the village of Niagara-on-the-Lake, planted a small battery, which was able to toss shells over into the French fortifications.

The English held on to the fort until 1796, although the Americans claimed that it was ceded to them by the treaty at the close of the Revolution. In December, 1812, the British captured Fort Niagara from the United States, but at the close of the War of 1812 it was again restored to the United States.

NO MORE DANDRUFF.

Newbro's Herpicide Destroys the Pestiferous Cause of Annoying Dandruff.

Does your head itch? Is your coat or dress full of white flakes after dressing your hair? That's the effect of dandruff. Is your hair thinning? Are you beginning to get bald in spots? Are you already, in fact, rapidly becoming bald? If so, that is the effect of a meanly little parasite that burrows in the root of the hair, and throws up the scalp in dandruff and eats off the hair at the root. Science's latest discovery is a destroyer of that pestiferous germ. That destroyer is contained in no other hair preparation on earth but Newbro's Herpicide. Try it, and be convinced. A delightful dressing. Sold by leading druggists. Send for in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. One Dollar Bottles Guaranteed. The Enterprise Drug Store; M. M. TUMOR OF FOUR YEARS GROWTH

Removed by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lindley, Ind.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound removed a cyst tumor of four years' growth, which three of the best physicians declared I had. They said that only an operation could help me. I am very glad that I followed a friend's advice and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for it has made me a strong and well woman, and I shall recommend it as long as I live."—Mrs. MAY ERY, Lindley, Ind.

One of the greatest triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the conquering of woman's dread enemy—tumor. If you have mysterious pains, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait for time to confirm your fears and go through the horrors of a hospital operation, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ill, and such unquestionable testimony as the above proves the value of this famous remedy, and should give confidence and hope to every sick woman.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

ACKNOWLEDGE IT.

Lima Has to Bow to the Inevitable—Scores of Citizens Prove It.

After reading the public statement of this representative citizen of Lima given below, you must come to this conclusion: A remedy which cured years ago, which has kept the kidneys in good health since, can be relied on to perform the same work in other cases. Read this:

Mrs. M. E. Proctor, 701 Holmes Avenue, Lima, Ohio, says: "I suffered for a long time from kidney trouble. My back ached a great deal, my feet swelled and I had severe pains across the small of my back and through my sides. The doctor's treatment gave me relief for a short time only and I became very much discouraged. When Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my attention, I procured a supply from Melville's drug store and the contents of three boxes completely cured me."

Mrs. Proctor gave the above testimonial in November, 1906, and when interviewed on June 24, 1909, she said: "I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as strongly today as I did two and a half years ago. I have had unlimited confidence in this remedy, as it relieved me after other preparations had proven useless."

CHAPTER XII THE MISTLE.

WITH a hasty glance about the garden to make sure he was not observed, the refugee approached Von Grollenhagen and Daniel and spread out his hands. As he stepped forward there was a movement of the window curtains in the casement above the doorway to the hotel, and he turned; but whatever had caused it, the movement had ceased and there was nothing apparent.

"The Italian journals call me a brigand," said the Russian, "and in this they are inspired by the Russian legation at Rome. I am known as Ivanoff Ivanovitch, and I have spent nine years in Siberia, nine years of hell. It is ten years ago since I was condemned in St. Petersburg, and you, who know nothing of the horrors of Russian prisons, cannot understand what I have suffered, my friends. I was a professor of languages, a translator in the bureau of the minister of finance, and I was trusted."

For a moment he paused and pressed his scarred hands to his lined forehead, then sighed and went on: "I was also a member of the Blue Fifty, a Constitutionalist, and as such was able to do a little for the cause, the cause, the same, my friend"—he turned to Pike—"for which your forbears suffered and fought—the cause of liberty. I could do but little, though I tried. At last I transferred the funds of the government to the Society of the Blue Fifty. It was a small thing. It was for the cause—not one ruble for myself. I swear it!"

Von Grollenhagen started back, with a gesture of repulsion, and Ivanovitch held out his hands. "Not one ruble for myself!" he repeated. "It was for Russia's sake, not mine!"

He paused and went on wearily: "But I committed the great Russian crime. I was caught, and through treachery. There was an Englishman who lived in Petersburg. He had contracts with the government. I thought he was my friend—my best friend. I had married in my student days in Paris. Ah, it is the old story!" he cried bitterly. "I knew the Englishman admitted my wife, but I trusted her, and I trusted him, and he made my house his home. So many have done that thing. I had 50,000 rubles in my desk—the funds I had transferred—to be delivered to my society. One day the police came to search, and they found only me—not my wife, not my English friend, not the 50,000 rubles. I went to Siberia. Now I search for those two."

He leaned against the automobile and pressed his hands over his face, while Pike and Von Grollenhagen glanced at each other sorrowfully. Finally the latter asked:

"It was they who sent the police?" and Ivanovitch replied vigorously: "After they had taken the money and were beyond the frontier themselves. That is all I have against them."

For a moment the hunted look left his eyes, and into them came the ravens gleam of the hunting, starving wolf. His fingers clasped and unclasped themselves spasmodically, and there was a set look about his jaws that spoke ill for the guilty pair should they ever meet this man with the manacles off his hands.

The lawyer shuddered slightly as he gazed at him, and he laughed a short, hard laugh.

"Looks to me as if that would be about enough to have against them," he said. Von Grollenhagen stood combing his wiry beard with strong fingers and evidently studying the case. At last he spoke.

"Then by your own confession you are an embezzler and a revolutionist," he said, and at Ivanovitch's start of

ped forward and laid his hand on the German's arm.

"The man's down," he said gently. "You wouldn't go back on him now?" He waited an instant and then chuckled grimly in a thin, humorous way. "Besides, you've made yourself one of his confederates, doc," he finished.

As he spoke Von Grollenhagen glanced at him quickly, and his eyes took on a tinge of surprise.

"Upon my soul, but I have, my friend!" Then he laughed outright. "Ah, from the first sight of you in the hotel at Napoli I saw that you were a great man!"

Daniel looked at him and grinned in his face.

"What you doing, doc—running for congress?" he asked, and the German joined him in the humor of the situation and then turned gravely to the Russian.

"I fear the carabinieri did not depart without suspicion."

"Suspicion!" echoed Ivanovitch bitterly. "They will watch every exit from the hotel and grounds. What can I do until dark?" Pike interrupted him quickly and motioned to the hotel.

"Why, doc, he's got the whole lower floor of this wing. You're his chief—four!"

"I was about to suggest it," interrupted Von Grollenhagen, in his turn, with some grinnings of manner. "I have a room that can well be spared for Professor Ivanovitch."

"How can I ever thank you? God bless you both!" said the Russian, going toward them with outstretched hands.

"Hush! Don't waste time talking about it," said Pike. "I shouldn't be surprised if you were hungry."

He took the refugees by the arm and steered him in the direction of the hotel, and as the three entered the wide door the curtains above the entrance

He kissed her hand rapturously.

she was agitated violently and the head of Lady Creech popped out of the casement with the suddenness of a Punch. From the keen look on her face one might have imagined that had it not been for her deafness she might have heard every word of the conversation that had gone on below her. As it was, after gazing anxiously in the direction of the road she withdrew her head sharply and within a minute came out of the door of the hotel just in time to encounter Horace and Miss de Champligny coming in from the grove. She approached them at once.

"Have you seen my brother?" she demanded excitedly. "Where is Lord Hawcastle?"

Horace looked at her with surprise. "On the other side of the garden, Lady Creech," he answered, "down there on the terrace," and watched, with some amusement, the speedy efforts of the grim old lady as she hurried off. The amusement, however, rapidly gave place to a more interesting pastime, for, summing up all his callow courage, he set himself vigorously to hint at a possible union between himself and the noble countess.

It was evident from the first word that the lady was prepared for him and that, while she intended to offer him every bit of encouragement in her power, she would not be satisfied with anything short of a definite proposal and more likely before witnesses if possible.

He made his initial move with some gaiety. She returned his banter with a mock seriousness and in answer to his challenge on her somber mood replied:

"But I cannot believe you are always serious, my friend."

"Try me," he demanded eagerly. "Set me some task to prove how serious I am." She smiled at him.

"Gladly," she said. "Complete this odious settlement. Overcome the resistance of this bad man who so troubles your sweet sister."

Horace took her hand and murmured: "You promise me that when it is settled I may speak to you?"

"Yes. You may speak to me—when you please." And at the words he kissed her hand rapturously.

In the meantime the suddenly rejuvenated Lady Creech had found her brother-in-law and had imparted to him words of the utmost importance. She had temporarily forgotten her deafness, or else the agitation that possessed her had removed it, for she was bordering upon a state of mind.

She walked him back to the hotel when she found him and talked continuously all the way, and as she talked his excitement grew to match her own. As they approached the garden Lady Creech said to him:

"I couldn't hear distinctly, for they mumbled their words, but upon my soul, Hawcastle, even if I couldn't hear well, I saw enough!"

WOMEN

ARE ELECTORS IN OHIO AND ENTITLED TO VOTE.

Special to The Daily News.
Columbus, July 24.—Having been informed that the Cincinnati board
of elections had adopted a rule prohibiting women from taking part in the nomination of candidates for school board at the coming September primaries, Secretary of State
Thompson looked up an official opinion rendered to him on June 13 by Attorney General Denman. It was found that this held directly against
the Cincinnati election officials, whose action is therefore null and void. The attorney general held that women were electors in Ohio so far as the choosing of school officials is concerned, and are therefore entitled to the same rights as other electors
with greater privileges. To have held otherwise would have been to make the law invalid. The whole question is a peculiar one. As a matter of fact, there are no partisan
candidates for these offices presented upon the official ballot, which is entirely nonpartisan, and contains no party emblem or description. It was really the purpose of the framers of the law to have the candidates selected by petition. If, however,
the primary nomination system is used, then the women must be permitted to use it. In determining the membership of the women in political parties their personal statements must be accepted for lack of any other means of determining it.
The attorney general, in passing
upon the question of control at municipal primaries where the women or city lies, within two or more counties, which is the case in about
thirty municipalities of the state,
held that the secretary of state was vested with full power under Section 2966-2 and subsequent sections. He can therefore designate which county board shall have charge of the primaries, and can make rules and regulations for the division of the expenses between the constituent counties. It is his present purpose to have the county containing the largest population in these cities
take charge of the elections.

DUTY OF 15 CENTS PER TON IS PUT ON IRON ORE BY THE JOINT COMMITTEE.

THE FIGHT OVER HIDES
IS YET TO BE ENDED

UNCLE JOE CANNON IS IN THE
WAY OF WHAT IS WANTED
IN LEATHER SCHEDULE.

Special to The Daily News.

Washington, July 24.—It took what was virtually an ultimatum to do it, but the opponents of free raw materials have gained a point with the Joint Conference Committee on the tariff bill.

Yesterday it was generally conceded
that iron ore would in all probability go on the free list, but after an all-day session, the conferees gave out the information that ore would probably bear a duty of 15 cents a ton. The present duty is 40 cents.
The House put the product on the free list and the Senate fixed it at 25 cents.

During the week, when all the odds
were against him, Senator Burrows,
of Michigan, declared with vehemence
that he would "die in the ditch" fighting for a duty on ore.
If the agreement reached by the conferees before they adjourned last evening stands, the Senator will be able to enter hale and hearty upon his campaign for re-election next year.

The fight over hides is not yet ended,
and the conferees are hesitating between propositions, first, whether to fix the duty at 10 per cent, leaving the rate on boots and shoes at 15 per cent, and, second, recommending that hides be placed on the free list and that the duties on shoes and uppers
be made 10 per cent and on sole leather 5 per cent.

Mixed Proposition.
The rule which governs Conference
Committees in their work is supposed to stop them from fixing a rate below
that placed on an article by either the House or Senate. Consequently the conferees in this instance would have disregarded that rule if they reduced the duty on shoes and uppers
to 10 per cent inasmuch as that would be cutting below the 15 per cent rate of the House, the lower
of the duties fixed by either branch of Congress.

This question, by the way, came up at the White House dinner the other night, when the President is said to have suggested a compromise on the basis of free hides, 10 per cent shoes
and uppers and 5 per cent sole leather.
Senators Aldrich and Hale, and Speaker Cannon told him such a thing could not be done without dis-
regarding the rule referred to.

"Uncle Joe" in the Way.
The only other way of getting such a reduction of leather through the House would be by a special rule reported by the Speaker's Committee on Rules, and to this Mr. Cannon is said to be violently opposed. Moreover the Western Senators, like Warren and Clark, of Wyoming, Carter, of Montana, and others, who will fight to the last ditch for a duty on hides, have delivered themselves of an ultimatum to the effect that the only condition on which they would agree to the removal of the duty on hides is that shoes, harness and other leather products likewise go on the free list. They reiterated this purpose
last night when they learned that the conferees were considering the alternative plan, to which allusion
has been made. Thus the hide schedule is still hanging in the balance as it was 24 hours ago.

There has been no change in the situation with respect to bituminous coal, which is promised a duty of 45
cents a ton, and lumber, which is scheduled for $1.25 a thousand feet,
with differentials in favor of the finished product. The coal and lumber men are standing by their allies, who are fighting for a duty on hides, and this combination is powerful enough to make the conferees hesitate about
the hide and leather schedule.

They Talked It Over.
The committee appointed by the House on anti-free raw materials a couple of days ago, consisting of Kenedy, of Ohio; Gaines, of West Virginia; Young, of Michigan; and Mon-dell, of Wyoming, had a talk with the House conferees late yesterday afternoon and will report the situation
as herein described.

From the foregoing it will be observed that the free raw material
propagandists are not making much headway in this campaign. And, after all, this is not so surprising, for under the protective tariff system
there would seem to be no preponderant reason why men who invest
their capital in coal, cattle, etc.,
should not profit by the bounty of a paternal government as much as the manufacturers, provided there is a difference between the wages they

and those paid by the employers of foreign competitors.

The tentative conclusion of the conferees to give iron ore a duty may be regarded as a triumph of the Steel Trust over its leading independent competitors, with Charles M. Schwab, formerly President of the trust, at their head.

George von L. Meyer is evidently of the opinion that the navy needs
among other things use air-buoyed sea-going secretaries. It's all very well to cruise on island highways in a forty-horse-power runabout, to start
the shores in a two thousand-ton
yacht with the weather eye open to beat it to the nearest cove of harbor ahead of any small craft that might blow in. But losing the navy, which is a sea-going institution,
calls for other qualifications.
Sometimes it is inconvenient to bring sixteen or more battleships home and put them in dry dock to be inspected
by the head of the establishment.
And a near view of the barnacles on the bottom of a ship when she is high and dry in a navy yard doesn't mean that the water is the water
about the manipulation of the steering gear or range finding with a heavy sea ahead.

If the Secretary of the Navy is going to stay at home and inspect navy yards and stand between the line and staff officers somebody else is going to run the fleet. Technically speaking, there is no fleet except when it is far out of the range of the navy yards. As the warrant officer said: "She ain't no fleet when she's in port; She's just boats."

Secretary Meyer wants to know more than "just boats." He is going to see something of the fleet in order
that he may ask the seagoing officers
what's what in proper nautical language. To this end he will take a cruise during the manoeuvres this summer if he can get away from his desk. Some of the navy sea dogs smiled when they heard this. They dropped each a wink and thought,
doubtless, that they would have some sport when they got the secretary off flattened with a booming gale off the port quarter. A gale on the port quarter is no place for a lubber. It jumbles one's innards. But, it developed later that these sea dogs
learned that the Secretary had crossed the ocean twenty times without turning a hair, and that he had cruised in all sorts of waters without calling for help. The only times he "went under" were on the English channel and on the Black Sea. His latter holding the banner for strange
and unusual stunts with the heaving
billows.

So it's quite likely that the sea-
going secretary will be on the forward bridge with Admiral Schroeder
wherever the weather, as a battleship has a beam like a mud scow and doesn't rock with every zephyr that blows.

Beekman Winthrop, the assistant secretary of the navy, is going to sea, too. But Beekman also knows what yachting is on Buzzard's Bay,
and he has cruised all over Boston
common in a low neck, sea-going hack. This last of course, was a long time ago but experiences at dear old Alma Mater—Harvard! Harvard!
Rah! Rah! Rah!—are not easily forgotten and will serve him in good stead when he is called upon to pace
the weather yard arm with the Rear Admiral commanding.

The newspaper men who cover the aeroplane flights at Fort Meyer are discovering new angles in the manoeuvres of Orville and Wilbur Wright.

Through a well-known member of Congress who professes a knowledge
of world politics and who confessed
that he patronizingly talked of such things with Wilbur recently, comes the information that the elder one of the Dayton boys is a keen student
of world affairs and wonderfully
well informed on international politics. The congressman admitted that he had learned a lot of new points
from Wilbur as to the policies of the foreign offices of France, England, Germany, Spain and Italy. For instance, that John Bull's fear of invasion via the Channel by aerial craft is well founded is one of Wilbur's conclusions.

There were those who figured that the Wrights' aeroplane was merely
the result of constant experimentation
in more or less hit or miss style.
A talk with Orville along scientific lines however, soon discloses the fact that he is a perfect encyclopedia of aerial technique. He is as well grounded in physics and the higher scientific study of atmospheric conditions and dynamics as he is in the three R's. In the fullest sense of the word—but with that rare trait among scientists of never airing his technical store of knowledge unless it is required of him.

The secret of the non-committal attitude the two brothers adopt toward the newspaper men and their aversion to interviews is based, so the newspapermen have come to believe, on the fear that they will be misquoted. It is impossible for them to talk about the aeroplane without using technical terms, and it is their conviction that these terms will be juggled and wrongly paraphrased
that makes the two aeronauts so
word-shy.

"We have never been able to make
a newspaper man understand the exact principles of the flight of our aeroplane," said Orville one evening
recently. "The precise points in our bi-plane which are covered by patent
have never been perfectly explained;
by own idea of the cause of the accident at Fort Meyer last fall has never been correctly printed. You newspapermen can't seem to grasp the technicalities of aerial flight."

"If Wilbur and myself want to have a good laugh," Orville continued smiling, "all we have to do is pick up a newspaper and read a description of our machine—nobody ever could fly in the monstrosities

that are so minutely and graphically described."

The newspapermen among themselves believe that Orville and Wilbur just like all scientists, can't bear
to have anything called by any name
which isn't the scientific appellation.
When Orville says "main plane," for instance, it hurts him back in his well ordered scientific mind to be quoted as saying "main wing."

Orville and Wilbur talk uninter-estedly—provided what they say is for publication. The newspapermen
all like the two brothers, despite their disinclination to formal interviews. Wilbur has warmed up sufficiently so far during the trials
at Fort Meyer to crack an exact half dozen jokes, and Orville's record is nearly double that.

If some nervous young lady
should attempt to hobsonize Orville or Wilbur, the shock would probably kill him on the spot. The Dayton boys don't like to be teased over;
they are the worst bored individuals
in the world when the German Ambassador, or Secretary of the Navy, Meyer, or Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, or some other high light of society
tells them what wonderful men they are.

A few days ago Mrs. Longworth, with Secretary Meyer, wandered over to where the aeroplane stood on the monorail awaiting a flight. She talked with Orville a few moments, and then Joe Leiter of Chicago came out, joined the group, and in passing turned to Mrs. Longworth and Secretary Meyer a moment to exchange a few words of greeting. Orville saw him, and when the three turned around to talk with him, lo, he was seated on the monorail with Lieutenant Foulis, a good fifteen feet away.

WATCH

PRESENTED TO RETIRING MAN-AGER HEPBURN OF OHIO
ELECTRIC

BY EMPLOYEES OF LINES, AT DONZE HALL, ON FRIDAY EVENING.

More than one hundred employees
of the Ohio Electric Lines gathered at Donze Hall on Friday evening,
the event being in the nature of a farewell to their popular general manager, Mr. F. T. Hepburn, whose resignation went into effect a short time ago.

The fact that Mr. Hepburn was very highly esteemed among the employees was made manifest in last night's affair, when F. A. Burkhardt,
district passenger and freight agent,
in a neat little speech, presented Mr.
Hepburn with a handsome open face
gold watch, the gift of the employees.
The kind words spoken touched Mr.
Hepburn deeply, and he was able to respond with only a few words,
which, however, conveyed to the boys his deep appreciation of the gift, and the thought that prompted it.

Hon. W. B. Ritchie and Dr. Vail
made splendid speeches that fully expressed the sentiments of the employees, and following the presentation of the gift, a number of the addresses were made. The whole evening was one of pleasure, though running through it all was the note of regret that Mr. Hepburn is soon to leave Lima, where he has made
so many firm and true friends.

Mr. Hepburn, although not as yet
prepared to give his exact future location, will go east in the near future to reside, which fact is regretted quite as much by the citizens at large, as by the employees of the Ohio Electric. All, however, join in wishing for Mr. Hepburn in his new location, the best of everything that life affords.

A Lady In Waiting.

By VIRGINIA BLAIR.

Copyrighted 1910 by Associated

Inez, having disposed of her sables
in a corner of the dark settee, took off
her gloves and leaning her elbows on the table, surveyed the tea room.

"Girls," she said suddenly, "will you look?"

Her three companions turned their exquisitely coiffured heads with a jerk.

"Of all things!" they ejaculated, and their amazed eyes met.

"It is Charlotte!" they exclaimed in a second breath.

As if some echo of their words had reached the waitress at a table across the room, she turned and, with perfectly immovable face, gazed on them,
but deep down in her eyes was a
sparkle of mischievous recognition.

Presently she came to take their order.

"Charlotte Stetson?" Inez began, but the waitress leaned over on pretense
of brushing away the crumbs. "Hush!"
she warned. "Nobody knows me. This is supposed to be a dark disguise."

And she was away before they could answer her.

She brought the soup and chops and salad and sweets, and they too interested to eat, watched the perfection of her service as she filed glasses, carried trays, placed bottles, made out the check and pocketed triumphantly the tip which Inez maliciously left on the mahogany.

"Where in the world did she learn to do it?" Inez demanded as the door of the tea room closed behind them and they made their way to their motor.

"Charlotte always could do things."

"How should I know it?" she asked.

"You have never told me."

"How could I tell you? He demanded fiercely, "when you were rich and I was poor?"

"What difference would that make?"
Charlotte asked softly, "if you loved me?"

"A man has his pride," Dick stated.

"And a woman her love," Charlotte whispered. "Oh, Dick, don't ever let money come between us!"

"It can't now," said Dick securely,
"for you haven't any."

And then Charlotte, with her head up, confessed, "I am not poor. I simply tried my little plot to get rid of Reginald Barrett. I knew his motives were mercenary, but neither wanted me to marry him. So while he was in New York for a few days I planned
my descent into poverty. I suppose it was silly."

"She stopped, then went on softly:
"And—didn't dream that you were in town—that you would know
that is where my little plot carried beyond my expectations."

"And now that you are rich I must go away"—Dick began, but Charlotte interrupted him with a little cry, "And leave me to be always a lady in waiting?"

"I don't understand."

"I shall always be waiting for your love, Dick." Her mouth and eyes pleaded together.

And then he surrendered. "Anyhow,
my old mine is beginning to make good," he stated later, "so I am not quite a beggar."

"You are rich," Charlotte told him as she laid her flushed cheek against his coat—"you are rich because I love you, Dick, dear."

"Now I know what you are up to."

Then, as a dapper little man with an upturned blond mustache stood in the doorway, she whispered, "I'll help
you out!"

Reginald came over at once.

"Can you make room for five at your table?" he asked Inez. His eyes fell on the trim waitress. He gasped.

"Why—why?"—And as Charlotte whisked herself away he turned to Inez.

"How much that girl looked like Charlotte Stetson?"

"It is Charlotte." Inez's tone was ingratiating. "Poor thing!"

"Why?" Reginald demanded. "Why
poor thing?"

"She has lost everything and has to work."

"Oh, but it can't be!" Reginald's tone was dismayed. "I had understood that her money was absolutely safe."

He stopped. "I—er—of course it is very safe."

Charlotte, coming back with the crabs, received an illuminating look from Inez.

"Can I serve you?" she asked Reginald demurely, and he stammered: "Oh,
yes. I'm sincerely sorry to find you here—Miss Stetson."

"Please don't talk about it." Charlotte's eyes were clouded, and her tone
of distress seemed so genuine that Inez started.

The girls delayed long over the lunch
and Reginald delayed with them, an

When You Receive Your Salary Check

It would be a good time to start your bank account or add something to the one you are already carrying. A good idea would be to deposit the entire amount received and make checks for your bills. In this way you could permit your monthly "appropriation"
to remain to your credit after everything has been paid. Every month that you increase will be a step on the road to independence,
and it will soon surprise you how fast your balance grows. Profit by the experience of others, for the successful men who are en-

WINTER WHEAT FLOUR

THE MAN WHO WAS ALONE

Copyright, 1929, by Benj. B. Hampton.

By Hugh Pendexter

At first he did not know what had awakened him. Then as the ragged filament of a dream of home was fully washed from his mind he stared at the open window in amazement. He had been aroused by the silence. His watch had stopped, but the sun, to his further surprise, had passed the meridian; yet no rumbling rush of the Second Avenue Elevated reached him. His first tangible thought was that the hall was an abnormal incident in the city's life. But it lasted! It endured. Even when he leaned from his window he could hear nothing. And he was within a block of Broadway!

Hurriedly dressing and disturbed by an emotion he could not analyze he descended to the street and walked to Broadway. He could see no moving life, not even after turning into the main thoroughfare. No stores were open, no cars or vehicles were moving. Nothing but a mighty silence, the like of which he had never conceived of before. It was the absolute quiet of eternal space, untroubled by breeze or bird. The very sunlight felt dead. Bewildered, yet not fully able to appreciate this prototype of death, he turned his course toward Madison Square. He passed in front of the St. James Building to examine an empty cab. His rural training at once led him to observe that the traces had been cut. But why? And where were the driver and the horse?

Hastening on he found the square as silent as the street. A new source of wonder was found in the patches of tall grass and several mildewed newspapers, blanking the date of yesterday. He gazed stupidly at the grass and then stumbled to the small building in the center of the square and slumped down on the steps. He would wait until some one passed that way. Two hours went by and he was as much alone as ever. No sound, no moving object; nothing but stiff buildings, that reminded him of sentinels in a cemetery.

At last he remembered he had eaten nothing that day, and as one in a trance he made his way to the nearest hostelry. It was silent and through the open doors looked empty. He entered the cafe and curiously contemplated some silver coins on the bar beside an overturned glass. Now more timidly, as he slowly became aware he was wandering alone in the midst of some awful metamorphosis, he tip-toed through room after room on the ground floor. On every side and at his feet was disorder, as if the guests had departed in great haste. Clothing and hand-baggage were scattered thickly about, while tables were cluttered with remnants of interrupted feasting. He rubbed his head with both hands and threw away his hat. Then, wild-eyed, stretched his arms to the silent walls and cried, "God!"

The sound of his own voice had a peculiarly terrifying effect. It not only echoed and re-echoed throughout the building, but it seemed to find the open air and sweep in a strained whisper through every street and alley. He must not speak aloud again, he told himself, and he pressed his hand against his side to stifle the dull thud, thud of his pumping heart.

But what did he fear? What was the danger his inner self told him to dread and avoid? It could not be a physical presence, as he had no inclination to appropriate a loaded revolver at his feet. Yet there was something, something that had caused luxury and poverty, youth and age, and even the riotous and drunken, to flee the place. Then a faint hope stirred him; perhaps it was only local, and down-town there was companionship. There was no smoke or noise to support this suggestion, however.

But the shadows of the deserted hotel oppressed him, and raking soft-footed to the buffet he picked up a loaf of bread and some cheese and a bottle of beer and hurried to the street. In a dull way he was surprised to find the bread so dry and the beer so warm and flat; yet he ate a little as he moved south.

Down-town was his objective point, but he could not bring himself to save any distances by leaving the shelter of the buildings. Now he was obsessed by the fear that he was being watched. He could not decide from what point of espial unseen eyes were following him; from any of the innumerable windows it might be. So strongly did the unwholesome dread seize upon him that he crouched in a deep doorway to be out of the range of all those sinister orbs, while he finished his bread and cheese. The beer-bottle he was about to throw away, but grew fearful of the tinkling of the broken glass, and left it carefully in the doorway.

Once, just beyond the hotel, when he thought he heard the sound of stealthy footsteps, he paused mid-way in the street and peered anxiously about him. Only half convinced that it was but the echo of his own steps he resumed his flight, moving more softly. In passing the east entrance of the Flatiron Building his eyes distended at beholding several spider-webs blocking the doorway. It was incredible, terrifying, and his soul shivered.

Where were the crowds? The dull, the intent, the listless, the hopeless and the ambitious faced people; where were they? Sympathy? What recked that now. Companionship! Companionship of his fellow-men, of a dog, of anything, was what he hungered for. Simply the companionship of a passing presence.

The glare of the countless windows had by this time become intolerable. His last glimpse of the Metropolitan building decided him on a new course. He would take to the Subway. With this thought came a hope and he thrilled with high expectation. The people, of course, fearing some calamity, had taken refuge underground. This was the explanation. Else how could an entire city empty itself in a single night so completely as to leave not a single individual behind? But the horses? Where were the horses? Bus and dray, private equipage and cross-town horse car stood abandoned all along his way. But the horses, like the drivers, had vanished. Then he remembered the spider-webs and wondered if they could have been spun in a single night.

He was still debating these two points when he reached a Subway entrance near Union Square. As he clattered down the steps he mechanically produced a coin and shoved it in the small window. But no lightning hand brushed it from his sight, no ticket-chopper waited expectant—the Subway was as deserted and quiet as the up-stairs world. A down-town express stood empty beside a local, and a wall of blackness forbade his passing beyond the rim of murky light filtering down the stairway.

He crept back, his distorted face reflecting the torture of his soul. Outside he crouched against a building and gnawed his fingers. Should he go north or south? Then the picture of the empty square, surrounded by leering, staring windows, also the stealthy footsteps behind him, decided him to risk the unknown and try for Brooklyn.

He was dimly conscious of being uncomfortable from the heat, and without bothering to remove his pocket-book he threw away the coat. The sun on his bare head made him feel faint at times, and this terrified him anew. He must keep up till he reached the bridge. For now, he reasoned, the people had crossed onto Brooklyn. But what about the webs on the Flatiron?

Then he paused as an inspiration came to him. Why had he forgotten the newspaper offices? Had he turned north to Herald Square and the Times Building he would have ascertained by this time what had eliminated the life of the great city.

"Newspaper Row," he mumbled; and then afraid of open speech he sought to condone the eternal silence by repeating the words in a whisper.

Panting amid hope and dread he stole into the small park and paused a bit from the curb to read the bulletins. He had intended to enter the building, but his courage failed him. Eagerly he scanned some tall letters directly before him.

WHAT MONSTER HAVE THE PEOPLE
CRE—

He rubbed his eyes in uncomprehending horror. What could it mean? Had he alone been left behind by a mighty exodus, or was he the sole survivor of an awful annihilation? He threw himself on a bench and madly endeavored to arrest his whirling, chaotic thoughts—to find a mental starting point from which he could theorize with coherency. The situation was inconceivable, he kept assuring himself, as his distracted mind rioted in a nightmare of conjecture.

He began in a dim way to conquer his intangible fears and resolutely applied himself to finding some addendum to the abandoned query so fixedly staring at him from boards. This incomplete bulletin was the most poignant note in the whole discord of silence. The very letters, with their pallidly white background, kept repeating the question with hideous intensity as he crawled about, forcing himself to examine each bit of paper that lay dead before the yawning doors. As he persisted the tumult of his nearly destroyed faculties quieted and the insane rushing hither and thither of his thoughts no longer seemed to fill the entire city with their clamor.

For several minutes he sought in the remnants of the newspapers for some clue to the cause of his astounding isolation; but he could find nothing that gave him any help except as the perusal of their columns strengthened him in self-control. Then he came upon a bit of "copy," blown from some window, or else dropped by some news writer in his flight from the building. Like the bulletin it reflected dazed incredulity, the groping of an astounded mind attempting to grapple with the incomprehensible. It began: "Are we to believe that the millions of hurrying, toiling, despondent, triumphant lives—actuated by an all-encompassing, all-pervading spirit of selfishness—have engendered some awful physical force, or personality, in the very mountains of steel and stone they have created, and does this Thing feed upon that which created it?"

In the next few pages the writer wallowed in a sea of words, evidently writing in a frenzied search for some expression that would convey intelligence; but finally, in despair at finding an adequate vocabulary, he had crossed them out. Near the end the copy was more intelligible, yet did not presume to state a fact. Instead, it asked, "Are there undreamed of forces in the atmosphere enveloping the city? Have the passionate endeavors for self-preservation, for gain, for lust, for triumph—exhaled for years—at last produced a concrete result? And has the final total solidified into a physical, tangible Thing, the like of which never before existed? Why not? Whence came the first awful forms of life that overran the world in the beginning?"

All this gave no answer to the staring bulletin, but it allowed the reader to sanely pursue a useless endeavor to hit upon a solution. Whatever had caused New York to become a solitude it was something entirely undreamed of before in the history of the world. It was not a pestilence, it was not a physical menace that could be met by man's cunning resistance—it was something infinite in potentiality; something that a great people had fled before, or had been eliminated by, in a single night. Then he remembered the mildewed papers in Madison Square and wondered if he had not slept longer than a night.

On another piece of "copy" he found scrawled, "More in heaven and earth than ever dreamed of in thy philosophy."

And again in some reporter's story of the first appearance of the phenomenon, or Thing—written doubtfully—he read this part, as follows: "The report of a vengeful, vaporous shape that extirpates all forms of life it passes over, has been so persistently telephoned into the various precinct stations that it can no longer be ignored and a quiet investigation is now on foot. It is said that whole families have disappeared from the crowded foreign quarters; while many reports have been made of strange disappearances from the hotel and office sections. It is also rumored that in several theatres only a small percent of the patrons came forth yesterday and that the greater portion of the audiences simply melted away as if they had never been. This is so preposterous that it could not be written if it were not for the mysterious disappearance last night of twenty theatre managers, who gathered in a Sixth Avenue café for the purpose of a secret conference, and who never came out. Nor have they been seen by their friends or families."

"While speculation is flying from one ridiculous extreme to another the fact remains the people are silently apprehensive of something they cannot name, and are leaving the city by thousands, hourly."

This was probably one of the first intimations in print, he decided, of the strange visitation. Besides this he read but two other items, both telegraphic bulletins, dated from Washington. The first said: "Professor Muehlank announced he has discovered that a new force exists in certain atmospheric belts, where huge numbers of people are gathered within a small radius, which, under certain conditions, is instantaneously fatal to all forms of life, and even absorbing, or eradicating, the physical frame itself." The other, dated later in the same day from the same city, announced: "Professor Muehlank was arrested while trying to force his way into the White House this afternoon. He will be examined as to his sanity. His errand was to inform the President of an astounding discovery, he said."

This was all that Newspaper Row had to offer. From it he deduced that the annihilating force attacked congested centers first. What it consisted of he could not conceive, unless Professor Muehlank had hinted at the truth. Whether other cities had been devastated he had no idea. But the instinct of self-preservation allowed him to see but one path—to make Brooklyn and seek the open country beyond.

His gait was now accelerated by the gathering gloom. Night was slipping upon him; and regardless of the clattering echoes he rushed with distracted speed for the bridge entrance. As he tumbled down some steps the gloom increased and became thick; and he sank against the cool rock in despair. Even while he was hesitating and dumbly endeavoring to summon up the courage to despair the tumultuous throbbing of his heart stopped at the soft pit-pat of approaching footsteps. The steps were coming to him from out the darkness, and with boiling tongue that sought to sound one wild shriek he turned, and staggered up the steps and into a new world.

For in place of the gloom a myriad of lights twinkled on every side. The city was illuminated. Now surely the people had returned; and yet the streets were empty. Still fearing he might hear the soft pit-pat behind him he ran for nearly a mile through the lighted street before exhaustion brought him to a halt. He looked back, expecting he knew not what. He could not conceive of the Thing's shape or size, but once the narrowing lines of lights encompassed any moving thing he believed reason would desert him and that he would fall an easy prey, or else unwittingly escape to wander aimlessly about, a babbling automaton.

He sought to divert his mind from this fancy by turning his eyes to the building across the way. The lower floor had been occupied by a leather dealer and the skins and hides took an fantastic shapes as he gazed. The office was brilliantly lighted and it seemed as if some bit of life must pass within his ken. Then he feared it might, and with one glance over his shoulder he resumed his flight. What agency had turned on the lights? Had he waited at the bridge entrance would his eyes have beheld the Thing that walked softly, like a woman?

He was now approaching a tall structure which he could not remember having seen before; a structure exceeding in height any other in all New York, he told himself. And even in his soul-terror he paused in awe and craned his neck to count the innumerable lines of lighted windows that in ever diminishing streaks of white led up to the vast dome, where glowed a huge ball of green fire.

"God!" he shrieked, falling prostrate. "The home of the Thing! The home of the Thing! It's growing."

For the ball of fire seemed to ascend higher and higher as he stared, as if the building were elongating and pushing it up.

"Give me back my people," he cried, stretching out his hands to the evil pile. "Yes, my people. Give them back. Give back the good and the bad! Yes, yes! Give me back the selfish! The evil! Where are they all?"

As if in answer there came a mighty clanking and the huge double doors of the structure slowly began to open.

"You'll be all right in a minute," declared the policeman. "No bones broken. Just bumped."

"You're all here! You've come back!" gasped the injured man, opening his eyes and staring at the circle of faces. "You've come back; the good and the bad. All come back!"

"Take a brace, old man, and don't go dippy. You're ain't hurt none," assured the policeman, kindly, as he helped him to his feet.

"Sympathy! sympathy!" cried the injured man in an exultant voice. "Ah, it all sounds good. I—I guess I'm all right now. No, no. I don't want the number of the car. It's all right. It don't matter. But how long was I unconscious?"

"Less'n a half minute," informed the policeman.

"Everything Comes to Him Who Waits—On Himself."

LOWER PRICES IN HOG MARKET

VEAL CALVES HIGHER AND SHEEP AND LAMBS DOWN
—CATTLE STEADY.

Special to The Daily News.
London Stock Yards, July 24.—Hogs receipts were fairly liberal today, and the market opened 5c lower. Later advices from other points showed some weakness, and the close was dull and about 10c lower. Quality on sale was good, and local packers were the leading buyers. Receipts of veal calves were liberal and the market ruled steady. Cattle ruled steady.

BERRIES BRING STIFF PRICES

HOME GROWN TUBERS TRIPLE OFF QUALITY—TOMATOES ARRIVING.

Prices in berries are almost prohibitive this week. Dewberries and red raspberries sell to the trade at $4.50 to $5.00 and black raspberries at $4.50. As for quality is concerned, little complaint has been made. Cherries bring $4.00.
Being larger and containing less moisture, southern potatoes at $2.25 a barrel have somewhat of a lead over the offerings from the Ohio crop, which has begun to move. Missouri tomatoes appeared on the market in bushel measures and sold to the trade at $2.25.
Dairy products continued to bring the high prices that have prevailed for some time. In meats, values showed a change, though demand is far from active.
Dealers proffer lower prices in flour, the grains, millfeed and similar articles.
Market gardeners any pens are unusually scarce this week. Demand continues and inquiries are urged from the consuming element.

WHEAT DROPS THREE CENTS

New wheat took another tumble in the local market, closing at $1.01 today, three cents less than yesterday's close. Corn has advanced five cents, being quoted at 75 cents per bushel. Rye also declined, being quoted at 65 cents. Oats remain firm at 45 cents. The quotations for today:

BATTALION

Of United States Infantry
Is Marching On Lima

WERE ENCAMPED TODAY ALONG THE MARION ROAD, EAST OF THE CITY.

WILL PASS THROUGH
LIMA DURING NIGHT.

THE MEN ARE ON A LONG 'HIKE'
FROM CAMP PERRY TO INDIANAPOLIS.

A battalion of United States Infantrymen is advancing on Lima and the members of the command are meeting with even less resistance than was met by Sherman's army when it marched through Georgia and on to the sea. They are expected to enter the city some time during the coming night, or probably in the early hours of Sunday morning, when they will first begin to peep up over the Lima Driving Park, and most of the thirty-eight thousand citizens of this peaceful city will be in slumberland. Only those along the route which the soldiers will take when they enter the city will hear the measured tread of their feet on brick and asphalt streets, for they are on a hike and they do most of their hiking during the cool hours of early morning and do their camping when Old Sol is soaring high and hot above their heads.

The soldiers who have seen fit to include this splendid city in their hiking itinerary, comprise a battalion of the Tenth United States Infantry. They have been in camp at Camp Perry, near Port Clinton, Ohio, and in fact, were at Camp Perry during the time that the Second Regiment of the Ohio National Guard, including our own Company C, was there. They are hiking all the way from their quarters riding on cushions in varnished cars like the Guardians did, they are hiking all the way from Port Clinton to Indianapolis, Indiana, where they will again go into their quarters at Fort Tenth United States Infantry. The battalion is in command of Captain Charles U. S. A. It reached a point about three miles east of this city, on the Marion road, at an early hour this morning and went into camp for food and rest. Camp will be broken at a late hour tonight and the officers and men will then march through this city and will proceed southward from Lima, en route to Piqua, probably following the Wapakoneta road. They will pitch camp again before noon tomorrow and will rest until early Monday morning, when the hike will again be resumed.

CHINESE

GIRLS WHO HAD BEEN SOLD AND HELD AS SLAVES.

ARE RESCUED FROM MOTT
STREET DENS BY NEW YORK
POLICE DEPARTMENT.

Special to the Daily News.

New York, July 24.—Moy Yon Toy and Chin Fung Choy, 15 and 14 years old respectively, were located yesterday at the rooms of the Children's Society. They are the two little Chinese girls who disappeared from their Mott street homes on Wednesday night, and for whom Captain Galvin and Detectives Nammack and Brickley, of the Elizabeth Street Station, had spent the last two days in a vain search. The greatest mystery has been preserved concerning the whereabouts of the two girls previous to their discovery. One of the girls, Yon Toy, yesterday made the following statement:

"My name is Yon Toy, and I am 14 years old according to American calculation, 15 according to Chinese reckoning. My father died when I was very young and left me alone with my grandmother, who was very poor, and I was sold to the wife of a Chinese, and she brought me over here to America about two years ago, and I have been with her ever since."

"I have had to work very hard in the house making buttons and button loops from early morning until late at night. Whenever my mistress called to me to do certain things, and when I was not able to do it fast enough, the boy would beat me."

The interpreter later said: "This girl's story is very pitiful. It seems

from her statement that she has been treated most cruelly."

The other girl's story was in a similar strain. She was sold in New York for $50 in gold, she said, and had to work from 7 in the morning until 2 o'clock the next morning. She said she would rather die than go back to Mott street.

THE ROUND-UP.
Franklin's Vegetable Discovery is purely vegetable. It contains no mineral poisons, narcotics or opiates. For sale by F. S. Butler, South Side Drug Store and Meville's Pharmacy. J24-7t

George L. Newson, of the Newson-Bond company, is still enjoying his fishing outing on the lakes of Indiana.

Victor Bond came home, yesterday, with a big bundle of fish all of his own catch over in Indiana.

Marion Matchette, who is here from Panama, on an extended vacation, bears every evidence of having become thoroughly acclimated to the tropics and is a living testimonial to the healthfulness of the Canal Zone, since Uncle Sam took charge of that territory. He is about forty pounds heavier than he was when he first went to the isthmus three years ago.

Hundreds of Lima people are taking Franklin's Vegetable Discovery for indigestion and constipation with splendid results. Ask for it at Meville's drug store. J24-7t

Information comes from Chicago to the effect that Barney Oldfield, the iron nerved auto racing man who was injured by being hit by an auto on a street in the Windy City several days ago, is not seriously hurt and will be in Lima next Tuesday to ride in the auto races at the Lima Driving Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Durnbaugh and children, of south Main street, will leave in a few days for a visit with relatives at Kansas City.

AN APPEAL

TO COMMON PLEAS COURT TAKEN BY MRS. RIDENOUR.

Margaret E. Ridenour, Saturday morning, filed an appeal from a decision of Justice Dempster awarding J. W. Seriff a judgment against her for $165 and costs.

The judgment was for a balance alleged to be due from the appellant for work done and labor performed on her premises at her request. J. W. Halfhill is the appellant's attorney.

BAD TRIO

MUST LEAVE THE CITY OR GO TO THE WORK HOUSE.

LILLIE GULLION AGAIN FIGURES IN POLICE COURT—CASES DISPOSED OF.

Shortly after midnight last night the police arrested two colored women and one colored man in the alley at the rear of the Electric Light company's office, charging the prisoners with disorderly conduct. The women were registered at the police station as Lillie Gullion, an old offender, and Lula Black, and the man who was employed as a swipe at the race track, gave his name as F. R. Casey. Today when they were arraigned before the mayor they were given their choice of leaving the city voluntarily or going to the Toledo work house. They agreed to leave the city.

Frank Albert, of east North street, charged with having assaulted Harold Wincemiller, was fined five and costs and sent to the county jail in default of payment. Pat Barrett, arrested for train riding, was also sent to the county jail.

Maek J. Bloom, the diamond salesman who was arrested yesterday, paid for a three-days' license as a peddler and was released. H. B. Polton, who was arrested with him, was dismissed.

MANDAMUS

Action Of Contractor
McHugh Decided By Judge Mathias

SUSTAINED THE DEMURRERS OF
CITY SOLICITOR MEANING
THE END.

PAVING CAN CONTINUE
ON BOTH STREETS

ELM STREET CASE PASSED FOR HEARING ON THE INJUNCTION LATER.

Considerable interest was manifested about the county capital today when it became known that Judge Mathias, of Van Wert, would render his decision in the mandamus suit of Contractor Wm. E. McHugh, against the city to compel the Board to award him the contract for the paving of Elizabeth and McKibben streets, which had been awarded to J. O. Shoup & Co., the Dayton contractors.

To the pleadings of plaintiff the city solicitor filed demurrers which were heard by Judge Mathias last week. In a written opinion today Judge Mathias sustained the city solicitor and dismissed the temporary injunction. This practically ends the case, and the paving will go on, it is expected, without further delay.

In the McHugh suit regarding east Elm street the court granted a temporary injunction assigning the hearing for the September term of court, the Board of Public Service.

WHITE PLAGUE

SUBJECT OF DR. TUSSING'S ADDRESS TO O. N. U. TEACHERS.

"The Great White Plague" was the subject of an able address delivered before the teachers of the O. N. U. summer school at Ada, this week, by Dr. P. L. Tussing, of this city. The address was a most excellent one, and greatly pleased the instructors who heard it. In regard to Dr. Tussing's address, the Ada Record publishes a long account, praising it in the highest terms.

CAMILLE AND ELMA M HAD NO TROUBLE WINNING

FAIR SIZED CROWD TO WITNESS CLOSE OF THE WEEK'S RACING.

There was a fair sized crowd out for the closing end of the week's advertised races, and though just about a good first day crowd, the interest was quite as intense as on the other days.

The horses were called out promptly at 12:30 o'clock with the track showing little bad effects from the heavy rains of the past two days, in fact showing it so slightly that the half in the fast pace was turned by Rock C, the original favorite, in 1:02 in the fourth heat of that event. The horses in this event finished identically with their standing after the second heat on Thursday, and it was Rock C, all the way.

The Trot.

There was nothing to it but Camille in the 2:24 trot and getting away nicely she was never headed or in danger, having but the one contestant, Lazarus.

The one other unfinished race showed a pretty contest, but Elma M. led the entire distance and was easily the winner. The entire three unfinished races from Thursday, requiring two heats of the pace, were over by 2:15 and the regular program started. The summaries:

SANDUSKY

LANDS THE NEWARK FRANCHISE IN THE OHIO STATE LEAGUE.

The city of Sandusky has landed the franchise which was surrendered this week in the Ohio State League. This announcement was made by Manager Dunnigan today. Mr. Dunnigan has been looking after the management of the Newark team since the franchise was surrendered by the club in that city. The erstwhile Molders will now be known as the Fishermen.

JARRED THE SULTAN.

Advice General Wallace is Said to Have Given Abdul Hamid II.

When General Lee Wallace was the American plenipotentiary in Constantinople he saw Abdul Hamid II. at close quarters—too close for comfort really—but his involuntary inspection was decidedly convincing as to the sultan's timidity.

It seems that from the day of his presentation to the sultan the general had grown in favor at the court and was frequently recommended to attend merely from the personal liking of Abdul Hamid for the American minister and the enjoyment of conversation with him. In those days the sultan was particularly eager over affairs in Egypt. He felt that Egypt was his personal property. Yet England had taken the control of the country out of his hands entirely. She had hardly said "by your leave," but had "advised" him that for the good of Egypt he, Abdul Hamid II., had better let her and then had gone ahead.

He had accepted the advice because he had nothing to say "no" with. Without a fleet what could any one say to England? This forced acquiescence worried the sultan continuously until he could not endure longer without madness. In his distress he summoned General Wallace and described to him in detail his humiliating condition.

The general listened with friendly sympathy, and the sultan, being relieved in thus talking in confidence to a man whom he knew to be sincere and altogether free from selfish interests, asked the minister what he could do under the circumstances. General Wallace said that he appreciated the trust and confidence of the sultan, but that, being the representative officially of the United States of America, he could not advise the ruler of another country as to what steps that ruler should take against a third power, especially when this third power was on friendly terms with his own country.

The sultan acknowledged the correctness of this position, but besought the general to make an exception, saying that there was no other man in the empire to whom he could go for one single word of honest, disinterested advice. But the general repeated that he could not be false to his duty as a minister and envoy from his government.

Then said the sultan, "Tell me as a private individual; tell me as a friend."

This appeal touched General Wallace deeply, and he said, "As a friend, then, and a private citizen, I will say this, that were I in the position you have described to me I should put myself at the head of my troops and fight to the bitter end."

At these words the blood left the sultan's face, and he fell to the floor in a dead faint. He felt their truth, and he knew, furthermore, that he lacked the strength of character, the force, the will power, to carry out such a program.

What would have happened had the sultan's heart been physically weak as well as not easy to conjecture. As it was, General Wallace did not leave the Yildie block until long after the hour he had intended, and Abdul Hamid II. never again sought a confidential interview with the author of "Ben-Hur."—New York Press.

Painfully Clean.

Amsterdam enjoys an enviable reputation for its cleanliness. Owen Petzham, who visited Holland in the seventeenth century, was particularly impressed by the spotlessness of its streets and houses. "Whatsoever their estates be," he writes, "their houses must be fair. Therefore from Amsterdam they have banished smoke. A least it soyle their buildings. Every door seems studded with diamonds. The nails and hinges hold a constant brightness, as if rust there was not a quality incident to iron. Their houses they keep cleaner than their bodies, their bodies than their souls. Go to one, you shall find the auditors shut up in muffled; at a second, the warring pan worked in Italian cutwork; at a third, the scene clad in embroidery."

SPIKER

DECLARES HE, HAD NO KNOWLEDGE OF ANY STONE BEING PURCHASED.

BRINGS ACTION TO BE DISMISSED AS PARTY

ASKS THAT DEFENDANT BE EXJOINED FROM CONTINUING ACTION.

Jacob Spiker filed an injunction suit against Daniel M. Stongle, Saturday morning.

The plaintiff states that the defendant filed a bill of particulars against E. J. Cantwell and himself, as defendants on October 1, 1908, and also an itemized account. The bill set forth, says the plaintiff, that he and Cantwell owed the defendant $45.74 for stone pretended to have been sold to them for use in the construction of the south Pine street school building in this city.

The plaintiff further states that the above bill, so far as it sought to charge him with any liability for stone was false and untrue, and that he never purchased any stone from the defendant for any purpose, nor agreed to pay him for any stone.

The plaintiff, so he says, never had any knowledge of the judgment rendered against him by Justice Everett on October 9, 1908, and that Stongle never appeared at that time to verify his account. The plaintiff never gave the matter any more concern. The judgment in Justice Everett's docket was wrongly entered against him, says the plaintiff.

On May 3, 1909, continues the plaintiff, the defendant began another proceeding in Justice Everett's court, to enforce collection of the judgment. The plaintiff prays that the defendant be enjoined from continuing with the above proceedings, and from all further proceedings in the effort to collect this judgment, and that this judgment be set aside and held null and void.

CONFERENCE

TO DISCUSS SECRET SOCIETIES WILL STILL BE HELD.

The conference to discuss secret societies will be held July 26th and 27th. The program as printed for the Y. M. C. A. hall, will be carried out in the assembly room of the court house, so says Rev. W. B. Stoddard of Washington, D. C., who is here making the preliminary arrangements. Mr. Stoddard says the National Christian Association does not approve of secret societies, and that reasons will be given at this conference. The speakers, he says, are well known Christian gentlemen.

MASONIC NOTICE.

A stated communication of Farrel Wyckoff Lodge, No. 585 F. & A. M. will be held Monday evening, July 26, 1909, 7:30 p. m. All Masons cordially invited. C. L. HOYT, W. M.

Miss Leah Munsinger and Miss Florence Edgecomb will leave on Monday for a ten day visit at Niagara Falls.

Murray and Mackey Company.

The Murray and Mackey company accomplished what many ordinary shows would shrink from attempting, even, namely, the production of that widely advertised play, "The Devil," last evening at their Pavilion theater.

A play of this nature must of necessity have the artists to handle these roles, the dialogue is such that the correct reading is essential.

To simply give credit, where credit is due, the play as produced last night will compare favorably with any previous production of the play could not be quite so elaborate, nor could it be quite so elaborate, but nevertheless, close attention was paid to detail and the special scenery "the crimson studio," caused most favorable comment.

The acting of J. M. Donavin was most praiseworthy. He kept in the character at all times. Never lost sight of the fact and made the devil a rather alluring personage instead of repulsive.

Florence Murray was seen at her best as "Olga." She played the part capably, delightful in the light comedy passages, and when occasion demanded rose to the situation. Particularly was this evident in the second act climax.

The gowns worn by the lady were exquisite, costly and elegant and the feminine patron was much surprised at the elaborate outlay.

The balance of the company gave a good account of themselves and the specialties were all good.

There is a matinee this afternoon when the "Girl from Arizona" is being played. Tonight which concludes the engagement in this city "The Shadow Detective" will be seen. A thriller-drama with lots of laughs and plenty of excitement.

When you go away for the summer be sure to have The News mailed to you. Address changed as often as necessary. Leave order with newsdealer, or send direct to The News Circulation Department.

DRIVER

FROM OHIO IN GLIDDEN TOUR WAS UNDER ARREST.

WILL REACH DENVER TONIGHT.

WHERE THEY WILL BE ROYALLY DINED.

Special to The Daily News.

Julesburg, Colo., July 24.—The Glidden tourists rested here last night, just over the Colorado line, preparing for the long run to Denver tomorrow, where they will be entertained for two full days and three nights. The Denver reception committee already has welcomed the tourists to Colorado by long distance telephone and by telegraph, and promises to make the visit in Colorado memorable.

The run from Kearney to Julesburg, a distance of 206 miles, taxed the endurance of the tourists more than it did the cars, and no new penalizations were placed against perfect score cars. Three cars previously penalized had slight additions placed against them, including the Jewel No. 7, Glide No. 10 and the Molina No. 102. All of the penalizations were for work done en route, the Jewel getting 1 point, the Glide 9.2 points and the Molina 1 point.

The voyage was both long and difficult today, and at one point fourteen cars required horses to draw them up a steep hill through deep sand. The only entire teams that did not require assistance were the Maxwell and Pierce delegations. The feature of this incident is the fact that the two teams represent the extremes of weight in the contest.

For the first time in the entire trip speed ordinances entered into the program. At Sutherland, Neb.,

all drivers were notified to regulate speed to ten miles an hour going through the town. In reducing speed suddenly Driver O. P. Bernhardt, of the Jewel touring car, collided with an automobile belonging to a physician, and later was overtaken and arrested on a charge of exceeding the speed limit. It was necessary to leave a bond for the damages to the automobile. Bernhardt is an Ohio boy.

The Gliddentes left early this morning for Denver, with 204 miles for turning point run, and they expect to arrive late this afternoon as the roads are in fair condition.

HOLM

NAMED AS TRUSTEE OF THE STATE ORGANIZATION.

LIMA MAN HONORED BY THE HOUSE PAINTERS, OF OHIO.

Special to the Daily News.

Sandusky, Ohio, July 24.—After conferring low grade calcimine and cheap wall paper, the Ohio Master House Painters and Decorators' Association concluded its eighteenth annual convention at Cedar Point last night by electing Fred Epple, Cleveland, President; N. H. Porter, Akron, Vice President; Joel Kennedy, Cincinnati, Secretary-Treasurer, and Theodore Fuchs, Fremont; Karl Holm, Lima, and H. H. Parr and George D. Cornell, Trustees.

W. J. Albrecht, Toledo, John Theobald, Cincinnati, and U. R. Bitter, Canton, were selected to represent the association in the international convention at Detroit in February, 1910. Cedar Point host out Canton in the contest for next year's convention.
